

From the earliest times of her history, the Church has obeyed our Lord's command: 'Do this in memory of Me.' Today these words, Do this in memory of Me, mean for us to come to Mass on Sunday: to be present, to listen, to sing, to offer up Christ to his Father along with the priest, to receive Holy Communion; and then we try to live outside the church walls what we have done inside.

In the time of persecution, the Church celebrated the Eucharist of the Lord in haste: the first altars were probably the hands of the priests. In the times of peace, the Church was able to linger over this mystery, "to decorate" it with beautiful surroundings and sweet music. The Feast of Corpus Christi, the Body and Blood of Christ, comes down to us from one of those peaceful periods of development and embellishment. From this period, we have in our Churches the tabernacle and beautiful altars. The tabernacle and the altar both serve the same mystery of faith, which is the Real Presence of the Lord present in the Blessed Eucharist.

For centuries, the Roman Catholic Church has used the term transubstantiation to explain the change of the bread and wine into the Sacred Body and Blood of Christ. Outwardly, nothing is changed by the Lord's words of institution, "This is My Body: This is My Blood." Inwardly, however, everything is changed. This inner change — the complete transformation of the bread and wine into the food of eternal life — is perceived only by the eye of faith. Our poor human gifts of bread and wine become the priceless gift of God's beloved Son who gives us his Sacred Body and Blood as our food for the journey.

This Sunday we celebrate the First Holy Communion in our Parish. Our children have made their first confessions, and have prepared their souls to welcome Jesus Christ in a singular and extraordinary way into their very beings. This day is a most wonderful, most important day in the life of faith. The First Communion celebration is a good opportunity for us to reflect upon, and remind ourselves, of not only what we receive in Holy Communion, but also what happens to us in Holy Communion.

What happens to us in Holy Communion? We are transformed. Jesus gives Himself to us in this way that we might be transformed and become more like Him. In becoming more like Jesus, we don't become less who we are, but more as we are meant to be. We become more fully human, and in becoming such, we grow in true joy and happiness. We are transformed so that what God the Father sees and loves in Jesus, He may see and love in us.

Congratulation to Children This weekend 101 children are celebrating their First Holy Communion in our Parish. Through this celebration, these children have completed the Sacraments of Christian initiation. As their journey of faith continues within our parish let us keep them and their families in our prayers. Because all Sacraments of the Church are structured as a dialogue, a preparation was needed to prepare these girls and boys for the day when they meet Jesus the Holy Eucharist. The work of the parents was essential in preparing their children for today's celebration. I thank Stephen Lunn, the Sacramental Coordinator, for his work to organize the whole process from the time of registration up till today. I also would like to thank Shandel Flynn, the RE Principal of the Guardian Angels School for her support and help in preparing the children for today's celebration. I am confident that through the frequent participation the Eucharist your children will grow in faith serving God in his Church. The First Holy Communion Mass was planned as the extra Mass. Many parishioners generously came forward with the ministry of music and singing (Mick and Sharon), of altar serving, of Holy Communion, sacristy and etc. Today, I say a big thank you to you all for making the First Holy Communion Mass a prayerful and memorable experience of faith for children, their parents and visitors. Fr Jan

Rosary Prayer During this year of remembering the message of Our Lady of Fatima to pray for peace in the world. We will be praying the Rosary for peace every Tuesday morning before Mass at Mary Immaculate Church starting at 8:35am in the Blessed Sacrament Chapel.

A short movie production at Guardian Angels

A few days ago five young students from the Bond University (the faculty of film and television) came to the Guardian Angels Church to make a short movie, as a part of their assignment. This short movie is called "Forgiven". A man on the brink of death enters a church and asks for forgiveness. It is good to see that the future media people turn for inspiration to religious themes. You can watch these few shots on the line the reference is below.
